My Story:

I studied at a grammar school even if I would have preferred a commercial school. Then I choose law but again I think literature would have been a better choice, in fact I didn't confer a degree. I learnt my English in Ireland, and I prepared for the ECDL. I was 22 when I became interested by multimedia.

I attended the SAE Institute in multimedia, a funny year, then I started to work for Sailing Online. After three months internship, I really started to work as a designer. And I worked with the company for one year.

We were the creative team of P&S (Perego&Solera) a good company for advertising and Public Relation in Milan with a number of well known brand names among their clients. But it was impossible for them to expand: it was a bad moment for small companies involved in Internet web site design. Then I moved to P&S working with Vincenzo Rossi, a really good art director but he had no experience with web technology. He is still a great "master".

Then i moved to a part time job in DodiciTrenta, a web agency in Milan. A young team, and a really good creative director: Massimiliano Chiesa, 6 or 7 months and i returned to P&S. I couldn't make the jump, I needed just one employer.

Two more years and Rodolfo Solera decided to join Twister Communication Group. One year there, but ADV is no longer the core business. I left or they let me go? I don't know. But I needed to try something different

A couple of opportunities in Milan, but I decided differently. I went back to Ireland, the economy was still growing there, my targets were: open my eyes and try to work abroad. After a month I found a job in 4PM, web agency in Dublin.

A great experience. I will miss them all. I said one year and one year it was.

Back to Italy I still wasn't ready for the Italian "environment", I worked for a couple of months in Latinoamericando Group, then I was chosen for the marketing support in Intermed, a biomedical company. I like it.

Work experience.

Hobbies:

Obviously computers (especially 3D and Flash) and reading (I have my personal books DB with the roughly 500 books I've read). I'm a very passionate and quick reader, my favorite writer is and has been Raymond Queneau.

Passions: I love clubbing, I collect club business cards, I'm a barman A.I.B.E.S. Juggling is another art I'm really into. I love to practice it outside. During the winter, I have fun with backgammon online

Sports: During the years: ski, rock climbing, volleyball, handball, but I have never had good results. Now: flow board, inline roller skating and I'm still bad in soccer.
